

CATHOLIC STUDIES ELECTIVE/SPECIALISATION UNITS, EDITH COWAN, CURTIN, MURDOCH UNIVERSITIES & UWA 2017

'Catholic Ed' elective units are open to all students. There is no requirement to be Catholic or Christian to choose these units. The units, however, have been written to meet the Catholic Education Commission of WA's policy requiring those seeking to teach in Catholic schools to gain 'accreditation'.

The 'tertiary study' component of accreditation requires the successful completion of three Catholic study units, either before commencing teaching or within the first five years of accepting a position in a Catholic school. The Catholic Institute offers accredited units at Edith Cowan, Curtin and Murdoch universities as well as the University of Western Australia.

Note: Edith Cowan University offers five units in Catholic studies each year at undergraduate level. Four units are also offered at post-graduate level for those seeking to complete a master's degree in education (see over page).

Note: Curtin University offers three Catholic studies units each year for the Bachelor of Education courses. Curtin has set its minimum class size policy to a lower limit of 20, so the offering of elective units is not finalised until a fortnight before the start of each semester; on-campus classes can only be offered when enrolments reach 20. Currently, all three units are planned to be offered in both on-campus/face-to-face mode and also in online mode for regional and metropolitan students who may benefit from this.

Note: Murdoch University offers one unit each year in Catholic studies in Summer School to assist Education students meet the tertiary study requirements of accreditation. Education students need to complete three units.

Note: The University of Western Australia offers one unit each year in Catholic studies in Summer School to assist Master of Teaching (Secondary) students meet the tertiary study requirements of accreditation. Students need to complete three units and we suggest that students investigate CIWA short courses.
